Case study five: Chronology continued

Date	Life Event	Outcome and/or response
1.09.47	Joel Tyndall born in Portmore, Kingston, Jamaica.	Joel had a big family and is still in touch with one of his sisters regularly, his parents died in the 80s.
3.12.50	Michelle Barton born in Portmore, Kingston, Jamaica.	Michelle's parents died when she was young and has lost touch with her siblings when she moved to England.
18.9.70	Joel and Michelle married.
24.5.72	Joel and Michelle moved to England and lived with Joel's cousin.	Joel got a job as a builder – he got on well and was supervising other builders after a few years. Michelle worked as a cleaner.
17.7.78	Clinton born.	Michelle had had two late miscarriages before this but they weren't given much advice or help about this. They were very glad when Clinton was born safely.
September 78	Moved into own flat.	This was positive for them as they could have their own space.
29.7.81	Daniel born.	Joel and Michelle said they weren't sure they could have another child. They said that it was a difficult birth but the hospital was more interested in the royal wedding.
Summer 1983	Daniel seen by GP and had some tests because he wasn't walking.	GP told Michelle and Joel that Daniel had 'development delay' but they didn't really understand why.
March 1984	Daniel is diagnosed with epilepsy.	At first doctors didn't realise this is what was happening. Daniel was eventually diagnosed and has been taking medication since. He has never really liked taking the medication.
September 86	Daniel started school.	His parents report that Daniel never got on well with school. Michelle went back to doing some part-time work as a cleaner.
Parents are not sure of dates	Various people see Daniel about his speech, behaviour, epilepsy.	Daniel had a few major fits and his medication was updated. He had some speech and language therapy and his parents said that helped a bit. Daniel got into trouble at school quite often for fighting and had to see a counsellor but his parents said that it didn't seem to make any difference.

June 1994	Daniel leaves school and Michelle stops work.	Parents report that they were managing ok.
July 1998	Clinton gets married and leaves home.	He moves to Scotland and visits a couple of times a year.
May 1999	Daniel gets in a fight in town and the police bring him home.	The police refer Daniel to social services.
June 1999	Social work assessment.	Social worker suggests that Daniel has some more activities so he starts to go to Mencap one day a week – he quite likes this.
October 2002	Daniel shouts at someone at Mencap centre and social worker visits for a reassessment.	Social worker works with Daniel and the centre to resolve the incident and support Daniel better through activities that he likes. Social worker arranges respite for Daniel. Joel and Michelle report that it doesn't work well because Daniel is unhappy and the respite home kept calling Michelle.
March 2008	Daniel hits someone in town and the social worker visits for a reassessment.	Daniel said it was because the person called him names. The police give him a caution. Social worker arranges a 'direct payment' for a personal assistant to do activities with Daniel.
January 2010	Michelle and Joel ask for a review.	Direct payment cancelled because it is difficult to manage and Daniel says he doesn't need it.
April 2012	Day centre closes.	Mencap arrange for Daniel to have a volunteer role at another centre supporting other people with refreshments twice a week. Daniel's case is closed in social services as he is not receiving any statutory services.
August 2013	Joel retires.	Joel helps out a bit more at home now.
September 2014	Joel has a heart attack	Joel is in hospital for a few days and starts medication.
28.1.16	Michelle and Joel ring social services and ask for someone to talk to.	Referral is allocated to the social worker in the learning disabilities community team.
4.3.16	Social worker visits.	Assessment with Michelle and Joel, then discussion with Daniel. Daniel agrees to have a reassessment in the next month.
6.3.16	Paperwork completed.	Sent to Joel and Michelle.
